The History of Laparoscopic Surgery in Greece started at about 1993. Then, the number of laparoscopic surgeons, who acquired the skills for laparoscopic procedures (according to the requirements of that period), was very small, especially in public Hospitals. In the years before the introduction of the laparoscopic approach, continuous medical education (CME) was not a concern for general surgeons. Gradually, the mean number of the performed laparoscopic cases increased, fulfilling the interna-
